On where he feels most comfortable playing and where he expects to play in New England:

Borrero: "Well, I think I feel comfortable on the left wing. The trainers have spoken to me about playing that position and I think that's where I'll be most comfortable."

On his initial thoughts about joining the Revolution:

Borrero: "I think it's a team where I'll be able to show my style of soccer. I think I'll have more opportunities to play here, with a little more freedom in the sense of playing my style. I'm very happy to be part of this great team."

On if he's connected with any of his new teammates over his first days in New England:

Borrero: "Yeah, from the moment I knew I was coming here I talked with Bou. We've talked a lot about the team's style of play and his style of play, and he's helped me learn a lot about things here."

On the days leading into his arrival to New England: (Translated from Portuguese)

Borrero: "I was very happy with the possibility of coming to the United States. The days there were very long. I was getting anxious, but they were important days to understand more about the club. Now that I have arrived, I can say that I am very happy to be here and I will work hard to do my best."

On if he knows any players who've played in New England before and what made him want to join the Revolution:

Borrero: “I know that [Christian] Mafla played here. He’s from my hometown [Palmira]. When I learned that the team was looking at bringing me here, I was happy. I think the first thing I saw in the offer was the opportunity to play my style of soccer and play a longer season. That’s what made me want to come here.”

On what he knows about MLS and his first impressions of the Revolution:

Borrero: “They told me it’s a league that’s growing. They’re bringing a lot of good players to play for teams here. My first impressions of the team are that it’s a great group that’s always happy, and when there’s happiness the team enjoys training. My first training session with team was today. I felt comfortable with the team and I think we’ll have a great season.”

On his personal goals with New England:

Borrero: “Well the first thing is to become accustomed to the team and the style of play the coaches want for the team. Learn the styles of play of opposing teams, learn to play at the level of intensity here. I think the intensity is very important. The rest will come after that.”

On what he learned from his playing experiences at Atlético Mineiro:

Borrero: “Well I think it was my intensity in the attack and defending. I think that I can switch from attack to defense very quickly. I think the conditions in Brazil are incredible in the coaching, tactics, and physically. I think those experiences will help me a lot here.”
